Hythe Conference Resumes Discussion Of German Reparations

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 16.—The British and French Coal Controllers during the Hythe Conference reached an agreement whereby France will be assured a minimum coal supply equivalent to that she has been obtaining for the past eight months. France will also take 45 percent of the coal exports of Great Britain and regulations will be made whereby each coal-producing area will contribute its proper quota to the percentage, thereby enabling freightage economies by France.

Paris, May 15.—The British and French Premiers meet today at Sir Philip Sassoon's villa, "Beaucaire," at Lympne, near Hythe, Kent, to discuss reparation by Germany. M. Millerand reached Lympne yesterday evening in time for dinner.

PREMIER MILLERAND GREETED IN FOLKESTONE

The French destroyer, Aliette, in which he crossed from Boulogne entered Folkestone Harbor at 7:20.

Although M. Millerand had sent messages asking that there should be no fuss at Folkestone, the streets were thick with people and the motor cars, carrying the Premier and his party, could only make slow progress through the town.

On the steps of Sir Philip Sassoon's house, the British Premier was waiting to receive his French colleague. Mr. Winston Churchill was summoned to Lympne on Thursday and had a long interview with the Premier.

Paris, May 17.—The French papers regard the results of the Hythe Conference as satisfactory.

General Hamilton Contends Gallipoli Failure Due To Unpreparedness

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 17.—General Sir Ian Hamilton's Gallipoli diary has just been published. While it does not add any fresh information with regard to the operations, it is very frank in its comments and makes it clear that the expedition suffered throughout from the haste with which it was inaugurated and the inadequacy of preparations.

Sir Ian Hamilton emphasised that there was a continual shortage of staff, officers, men and ammunition and at one period, he states, there was a shortage of 1,450 officers to meet which 25 youngsters were sent out to complete their training. Lord Kitchener offered Sir Ian Hamilton the command which made it clear that the British Headquarters in France disapproved of the scheme.

Sir Ian Hamilton describes Lord Kitchener as an "individualist" and "a master of expedients" but says that in 1915 Lord Kitchener had lost the faculty of forcing others to act. "While he still had moments of God-sent intuition," the writer adds, "he was no longer the old K. of Khartoum and Pretoria." Sir Ian Hamilton contends that the Suvla landing was undoubtedly the right course to capture the Peninsula but chances were thrown away by sheer lack of energy and bad leading.

The Aero Club of Southern California was the complainant.

LIVING COSTS BASIS OF CASE IN U.S. COURT

Can Married Couple Live In Shanghai Comfortably On $350 A Month?

Whether $350 a month is a sufficient sum to enable a man and wife to live comfortably in Shanghai is one of the acutely interesting questions that will be considered in the course of the trial of the case of H. S. Honigsberg and Company versus Charles B. Jones, which with a counter suit will open this morning in the United States Court for China before Judge C. S. Lobingier. Another phase of this trial that will attract interest will be a comparison of living costs in San Francisco with those here.

In the original action the Honigsberg Company, alleging breach of contract, is seeking to recover damages in the sum of $10,000 and in his counter suit Mr. Jones asks for damages in the same sum, contending that false representations were made to him concerning living costs in Shanghai before he came to China to accept employment with the Honigsberg Company.

THREE YEAR CONTRACT

In the company's petition it sets forth that Mr. Jones was engaged in the capacity of shop foreman in Shanghai under a three-year contract that went into effect February 10 last. By the terms of this contract, a copy of which accompanies the petition, Mr. Jones was to be paid at the rate of $350 a month and the company charges that the employe broke the contract on April 28 last by quitting.

In the answer contained in the counter suit Mr. Jones asserts that before he came to China, when it was known he was about to take a bride, it was represented to him that a married couple could live just as comfortably in Shanghai on $350 a month as it could live in San Francisco for $150 Gold a month. Jones says this representation is not true and he asks $10,000 in damages for having been led to come to China under the circumstances.

The Honigsberg Company is represented in the action by Mr. Earl B. Rose, Mr. Jones is represented by Fleming, Davies and Bryan.

Erin's Military Ruler

Sir Nevil MacCready.
INTL.

Sir Nevil Macready, the newly appointed military ruler of Ireland, has had a long career dotted with incidents in which his firmness and inflexibility and his dominating spirit have settled and smoothed over several critical situations in Great Britain. It was Macready who soothed the raging miners of Tonypandy, and for this he later became known as "the strikebreaker of Tonypandy." During the Ulster trouble he was sent there disguised as a "resident magistrate," and despite the hate of the Ulsterites, he dissipated much of the effect of the so-called pogrom attempt. Sir Nevil was Adjutant-General at the British General Headquarters in France. In Ireland Macready is no doubt taking up a difficult task.

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 17.—Four hours fierce rioting occurred at Londonderry yesterday between Sinn Feiners and Unionists. There was a lot of revolver firing and the police charged the crowds with fixed bayonets. Sinn Feiners concealed behind wagons shot at detectives, killing the Chief city detective. Another police officer was injured and two civilians, seriously.

A sergeant in County Kerry has received a remarkable letter warning him that he will be shot by order of the "Sinn Fein Governors," because he is a diligent servant of the Crown. The letter ends by quoting the names of policemen recently murdered.

Nationalist candidates are withdrawing from the County Council elections all over Ireland excepting in the Unionist counties. This is giving the Sinn Feiners walkovers, owing to intimidation. One Nationalist candidate recently had his house raided, and was dragged out at midnight and forced to retire from the elections.

Twenty-three Sinn Fein hunger-strikers who were recently removed from Wormwood Scrubbs prison to hospital have walked out and are at large in the metropolis.

Humble Shopgirl Captivates Prince

Pretty Carolyn Granberry, humble shopgirl in a Panama Canal commissary store at Balboa, whose captivation of the Prince of Wales upon the occasion of the latter's visit to the Canal Zone aroused the resentment of many of the society ladies present who had hopes of keeping the Prince all to themselves. Carolyn was present at the grand ball given for the Prince by the British Minister, only through an invitation which included a younger sister who was to dance before the Prince. Two dances went by and then she was confronted by the Prince, who asked in a frank, boyish way if she would dance with him. One, two, three, four dances followed. The next day two of the Prince's aides called at the Granberry home in Balboa and took Carolyn to the battleship Renown, where there was an informal reception. The same night Carolyn went to the reception given by President Le Fevre, of the Republic of Panama, by special invitation of the President. And she danced with the Prince.

More Big Ships Sent Here To Solve Traffic Problem

Pacific Mail To Get Five Passenger Liners From Shipping Board, Private Dispatches Report

Following yesterday's announcement that five new passenger liners are to be placed in the Oriental service definitely in October by the Admiral Line, private commercial messages that were received in Shanghai yesterday bring the news that an additional five passenger liners have been allocated by the United States Shipping Board to the Pacific Mail.

In view of announcements that have been issued in past weeks by the Pacific Mail this means that Shanghai's ship service from America within the next six months will be increased by the wholly new Admiral Line service of five fast ships and three vessels now on the run to this port from America will be replaced by three others of approximately double their cargo and passenger capacity.

SEMI-WEEKLY SAILINGS

These new services in addition to existing trans-Pacific passenger lines, the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, and the China Mail, will give the port of Shanghai semi-weekly sailings to America and in the opinion of shipping men will bring to a speedy end the present congestion of traffic between here and the United States.

The announcement reported from the head office of the Pacific Mail some time ago was to the effect that in the event of the allocation of Shipping Board boats the three liners at present in the service to the Orient, the Venezuela, Ecuador and Colombia, will be taken off the trans-Pacific run and will be replaced by the larger and faster Shipping Board steamers.

In view of the fact that the allocation of five of these Shipping Board liners now has been made to the Pacific Mail, it is expected that the company will substitute them for the boats to be removed as soon as the new ships can be put into service. The Ecuador, Venezuela and Colombia, originally built for South American trade, are to be put on to Pacific Mail runs from San Francisco to the Atlantic Coast through the Panama Canal. The Shanghai office of the Pacific Mail has not yet been apprised when the change may be expected to be put into effect, but it is understood that it will be carried out in the fall at about the time

U.S. Oil Companies Seek Square Deal In Foreign Lands

American Dollars Will Be Sent To Any Field If Government Will Define Policy

(Reuter's Service)

San Francisco, May 15.—Mr. Bedford, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Standard Oil Company, told the Foreign Trade Convention today that there would be no famine in gasoline and other petroleum products in the United States although there might possibly be a shortage before the end of the summer.

"We are at last sensing," Mr. Bedford added, "what the British have recognised, that the country, controlling the petroleum supply, will control the trade of the world. American dollars will be sent to any field where there is a remote possibility of getting oil if the State Department tells the Companies its policy towards them when established. I am speaking for all American companies when I say that we are not getting a square deal in foreign lands."

'Foreign Minister' Said To Be Ex-Soviet Leader Noted For Cruelty

KIEFF WRECKED

Residents Cheer Poles' Entry—Incendiarism In Petrograd

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Peking, May 19.—The Russian town of Verchse-Udinsk, just East of Lake Baikal, today officially announced the formation of a Far Eastern Republic, including all that territory from Lake Baikal to the Pacific. It is proposed to call immediately a constitutional convention for the republic, which is undoubtedly planned as a buffer State between Russia and Japan.

Among the assurances given in the announcement are that the new State is Non-Soviet, that it pledges the safety of all foreigners and that it guarantees the security of all private property.

It insists that all foreign troops, especially the Japanese, shall withdraw and that all Soviet forces must cease their Eastward march forthwith. The Powers are asked for recognition and an appeal is also made to them to help restore normal conditions in Siberia. Amnesty is offered all Kolchak and Semenoff adherents.

The new State was formed with Soviet consent, it is pointed out here, and also, probably, with the consent of Japan. It is believed, however, that as the price of her consent Japan was given many valuable concessions.

WOMAN COUNTERSIGNS OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

(Reuter's Service)

Peking, May 19.—A Russian, comparatively unknown outside Siberia, named Krasnochekoff, as "Foreign Minister," has formally notified the Allied High Commissioners in Siberia of the formation of an independent Republic at Verchne-Udinsk as a "Buffer State."

The notification, which is countersigned by a woman, states that the Siberians are tired of internecine warfare and that their rulers have hitherto proved to be brigands, therefore the people have decided to establish an independent State, consisting of all territories to the east of Lake Baikal, including Kamtschatka and Saghalien.

It describes the Chinese Eastern Railway as "a right of way." Krasnochekoff says that he is anxious to meet the Allied representatives. He declares that he is acceding to the wishes of the Japanese for a buffer State after which he hopes that all the Allied forces, including the Japanese, will quickly evacuate Siberia.

MOVEMENT MAY BE INSPIRED FROM MOSCOW

Krasnochekoff was formerly a Bolshevik with a record for cruelty.

Though it is thought that the movement may be inspired from Moscow, the Legations here are not inclined to take it seriously without further information.

London, May 17.—The Times Kieff corrspondent telegraphing on May 11 says:

"The plight of the city (Kieff) is pitiable. It is a city of the dead. Factories are deserted and decaying and shops are closed and their windows broken. Although Kieff is surrounded by the richest cornland in Europe, there is no food and no water supply, as the Reds wrecked the pumping station. Everywhere are filth, disorder and the usual horrible execution chambers.

"Everyone is thankful that the Bolsheviks have gone. The townsfolk stood for two hours cheering the Polish forces as they marched into the city. The Red forces lack fighting spirit. Only twice on the Dnieper were the Poles vigorously resisted, the first time when a regiment of Chinese held their position to the last man and the second when German manned armored trains fought their way through after having been surrounded."

MUNITION WAREHOUSES ARE FIRED IN PETROGRAD

London, May 17.—The Moscow wireless service has been resumed. Its silence remains unexplained. Propagandist appeals are being sent out to proletarians of all nations declaring that the fighting on the Polish front is very fierce.

The wireless admits the evacuation of Gaisinski by the Bolsheviks.

A Reval telegram to the Morning Post says that great incendiary fires have occurred in Petrograd, destroying several munition warehouses. It is stated that the explosions were heard ten miles away.

The telegram adds that it is evident that the Polish offensive has nearly shattered the Soviet regime.

London, May 17.—A Tetheran telegram to the Times dated May 12 says:

"Enver Pasha has arrived at Baku where Russo-Tartar forces, fifty thousand strong, are reported to be concentrating against Georgia and Batum with a view to linking up with Mustapha Kemal.

Funny-Face Is Author Of Bad Luck For Cops

Central Police Station was in turmoil yesterday.

There were cries for the Fire Brigade and the S.V.C.

Seven years bad luck had descended upon the place and none knew what else might happen.

It was all because of Funny-face.

He's a sportive youngster and when he starts on a rampage something drops.

First he invaded the apartments of a sedate police official of abstemious habits—and broke every glass on the sideboard. The official raved. But Funny-face leaped out of an open window and went his predatory way.

He called on everyone within calling distance. He drew no fine distinctions as to rank. And it was only when he looked at himself in a large mirror and then plunged through it that the station attaches became exceedingly annoyed.

A coolie squad, armed with ladders, bamboo poles and persuasive language, was requisitioned and set out in pursuit.

Funny-face, who has been a station favorite and a care for the whole force since his rightful protector went home on long leave recently, started on his rampage at noon. He was captured shortly after dark and the worst punishment he received was to be called a preverse monkey.

Twelfth Night

Rehearsals are going so well that the forthcoming performances of "Twelfth Night" by the A. D. C. Players is certain to be a success.

Those who have been behind the scenes and watched the producer, Mr. E. P. Graham Barrow, at work with the cast have been unstinted in their praise of not only the able manner in which the A. D. C. players have accepted their roles but also for the way in which their director has aided them to interpret the work of the bard. His previous experience in the festivals at Stratford-on-Avon has stood Mr. Graham Barrow in good stead.

A remarkable feature of the performance is to be the music. Mr. Dexter, who is directing that part of the program, has seen to it that the airs will be Shakespearian throughout and that every number shall be worth listening to.

Mr. Peyton Griffen has fairly excelled himself in creating the scenery. His work is too well known to call for much comment but it is timely to mention that he has been at his best in this instance.

SHIPMENTS FROM ALL CHINA FOR McTYEIRE FETE

Unique Articles Sent To Bazaar Tomorrow And Saturday

Shipments of native products and souvenirs characteristic of China are continuously arriving from the various industrial centers to be offered for sale at the McTyeire Sorority Fete which begins at 3 o'clock tomorrow at the ex-German Club, Jinkee Road and The Bund lasting two days.

The spacious hall of the former rendezvous of the Teutons is jammed with cases of ivory from Canton, Cloissonne and red lacquer from Peking, unique designs of porcelain from Chintehcheng, Kiangsi, embroidery from Nanchang, chopsticks from Chefoo and other articles from Hangchow, Soochow, Tientsin and Kiukiang.

Wicker work, taboret stands, native maids' hats similar to the Leghorn hats of America in texture, sweaters in various shades of colors, ornamental hairpins, lacquer picnic baskets, Peking carved lanterns, candlesticks with silk fringes, light suitcases, kingfisher pins, walking sticks for ladies and gentlemen, scissors, and shoes are among other articles received from outports.

The club yesterday presented an atmosphere of a new department store preparatory to opening and also assumed the aspects of a whirlwind circus. Busy coolies "hayooed;" pretty maids danced, recited, sang and elucidated. Inquisitive eyes scrutinised the contents of each case as it was opened.

Today will be spent in putting on the finishing touches, in rehearsing the various programs and arranging the counters. The committee in charge is confident that it will be a distinct success. No efforts have been spared in securing the assistance of the leading shopkeepers, hotels and societies. The committee wishes to emphasise that the fete will be taxed to capacity on Saturday as the sale of tickets shows. Visitors are urged to attend tomorrow and at the same time avoid the "pick-overs."

"Sylvia," the comic operetta to be staged each night at 9 o'clock promises to be the biggest attraction. Though never attempted here by any amateurs, it is as melodious as any of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas. The players moreover, will not all be mere amateurs. They are known to Shanghai audiences, having delighted the local public recently in the "Tennesse Princess" and in "Every Woman."

SHANTUNG IN DRIVE AGAINST GRASSHOPPERS

Recurrance Of Cholera Plague Also Feared By People Of Laichowfu

(China Press Correspondence)

Laichowfu, Shantung, May 13. —Last year there was cholera all through this section and the pessimistic say it will doubtless come again this summer, for, say the Chinese, such plagues usually come two years in succession. But before this plague could make its appearance a plague of grasshoppers has come upon the people.

The Chinese of this part of Shantung are better situated financially than sections west, largely because of the great amount of money that comes in from straw braid, and, too, a great many fish are caught along the Gulf of Pechilli on the north. Not a few of the men go to Manchuria and there enter business.

BOYS GO ABROAD

A great difficulty in building up middle and higher schools in this section is the going abroad of so many boys when they get enough education to read and write. Those who go from here usually enter business while Chinese from farther west who cross the river (Gulf) and go into Manchuria are of the coolie class. Not a little money is sent home from Manchuria by the young men who go from here and enter business there.

In one of the villages a fine school has been opened, supported solely by the young men of the village who are employed in Harbin.

If it were not for the money that comes in from abroad these people would not be able to subsist, for nearly every year either the spring or fall crops fail.

It is remarkable how so many people living in villages so close together and with so little land all manage in one way or another to "get over the days."

GRASSHOPPER PLAGUE

The grasshoppers have come in some six or eight different localities southwest and south of Laichowfu city. They are little fellows about the size of big black ants. Some are black, others grey while some are white. In some places they are said to actually cover the ground. There are millions and they are stripping the wheat. In many places the leaves have all been eaten off and only the stalk is left.

The millet is just coming up and it is being eaten off as fast as it appears.

As yet they have grown no wings, but the Chinese say they will increase in size if not exterminated.

There has been no rain for two months or more. The wheat was already suffering much for rain. It would take heavy rains, it is said, to rid the fields of the grasshoppers.

MUCH GRAIN TRAMPLED

Several hundred people in one big field were working today systematically to rid their locality of the plague. They had literally surrounded the large section where grasshoppers had appeared, and with brooms, shovels, boards, old shoes and hats were beating the insects and driving them into the center. Here a pit had been dug. Those that were not first killed were driven into this pit and either killed or covered with dirt. The county official is compelling people from all the villages of each infected district to come out in full force to combat the danger which threatens the whole county, for it is feared that they will spread to other localities.

It is pathetic to see how the wheat has either been destroyed by the grasshoppers or is being trampled under foot by those who are killing them, for every head of wheat is precious in this part of the world. All land is now in cultivation and it is impossible to combat the menace without destroying crops. There have evidently been similar plagues in the past, for every village or two has a temple in which "the grasshopper god," a mud image, is worshipped, and many are resorting to him at this time, seeking to appease his wrath.

In The U.S. Court For China

The following decision was handed down by Judge C. S. Lobingier in the United States Court for China in the case of The Oriental Press versus the Robert Dollar Company. Mr. J. Em. Lemiere appeared for the plaintiff and Messrs. Fleming, Davies and Bryan for the defendant.

SYLLABUS

1. Warehousemen: Defined. A shipper who regularly stores cargo for profit is a "warehouseman" within the meaning of the warehouse receipts act.

2. Lien. A warehouseman's lien, at common law, attached only to the specific property for which the storage charge was imposed.

3. But by said statute, which is in force in this jurisdiction, the lien for such charge attaches to other goods of the same bailor "whenever deposited."

4. Charges: A general custom among warehousemen. A: In Shanghai to charge a month storage on goods left more than ten days, will be enforced in the absence of a showing of unreasonableness.

This is an action to recover back a payment by plaintiff to defendant of Tls. 659.80 and an additional sum as damages for the latter's alleged refusal to release a cargo of paper. No witness who claims to have been present and heard such refusal testifies thereto, and defendant's wharf manager, who was present and in charge of deliveries, expressly states (p. 30) that the cargo was not withheld: He further testifies, however, that plaintiff's

"representative came up to take delivery of it and we said alright let it go ahead and don't forget that you owe us Tls. 659.80 storage on the Bessie Dollar and I am going to cover myself. You can go ahead and take delivery, take this up with your manager and tell him that if you don't pay this amount before this is all delivered, I am going to retain some of this cargo to cover the amount of this storage bill. Having told his representative that, I phoned to the Oriental Press and told Mr. Bos the same thing. That I think was on June 9, I think on June 10 the accounting department of the Robert Dollar Company phoned me that this had been paid and credited to their account, and so I said go ahead, and he then finished it up and there was no stoppage at all."

The "Tls. 659.80 storage" here referred to was for a cargo which had arrived some two weeks previously on March 17 and passed the customs "between 4:20 and 4:30 p.m." on March 26. Two apparently disinterested witnesses, actively connected with the shipping business in Shanghai, corroborate the wharf manager that, according to the custom prevailing in Shanghai shipping circles, the ten-day period of free storage terminated on the last named date and that thereafter defendant was entitled to charge for one month storage as it did. We do not think this is overcome by testimony that other shippers "if you ask it * * will grant you one day sometimes." (p. 14).

Defendant having the right to impose the charge for storage did it also have the right to enforce the charge by retaining subsequent cargo? Its counsel concedes that at common law the lien extended only to the specific goods for which the charge was made. But under a statute, admittedly in force in this jurisdiction,

"A warehouseman's lien may be enforced against all goods, whenever deposited, belonging to the person who is liable as debtor."

The term "warehouseman" is defined in the act as "a person lawfully engaged in the business of the storing goods for profit" which would seem clearly to include plaintiff. Nor does the exception regarding negotiable receipts apply here for no such receipt appears to have been issued. It follows that plaintiff had a lien on the cargo in question for storage charges on the previous cargo, although the lien on the latter was, as plaintiff claims, lost by its delivery. It follows also that defendant was within its rights in requiring payment of such prior storage charges before permitting complete delivery of the second cargo.

Such being the case the question of what plaintiff's damages would have been had such requirement been wrongful becomes purely academic. As defendant's counsel points out, however, there is no evidence that the bill for coolie hire alleged to have been caused by delayed delivery has ever been paid.

On the whole we must find for defendant and it is accordingly considered and adjudged that plaintiff take nothing by its petition and that defendant recover its costs.

Every day your complexion pays toll to dust and wind

The dry winds chap and roughen the skin; dry heated air draws and parches it. The constant strain under which we live—the ceaseless activity of crowded days, the constant effort, the lack of rest—all these things take daily toll of the complexion.

You can protect your complexion from the wear and tear of both summer and winter—can prevent that tired, drawn look from appearing in your face, by giving your skin the care it needs.

Apply a little Pond's Vanishing Cream when you motor or travel; rub it in lightly. This will protect the sensitive pores from grit and grime, will keep your skin free from that parched feeling that generally follows exposure to dust and dirt. It has a wonderfully beautifying effect, and as a base for powder it is so effective that one powdering is sufficient for the whole evening.

This fragrant, dewy cream contains a skin-softening ingredient of great value, one that skin specialists recognize as most efficient in keeping the skin supple, for giving it the transparent freshness everyone admires.

TROOP SHIPS CONVERTED

In addition to the ten Shipping Board liners that now have been allocated to the Admiral Line and to the Pacific Mail, at least two more of the large passenger liners of the shipping board, which originally were designed as troop ships and were converted into modern liners after the armistice, are to be allocated to companies operating in the trans-Pacific trade.

No intimation has yet been given that efforts that the China Mail has been making to obtain Shipping Board passenger boats have been successful and reports heard recently in shipping circles are that the two remaining liners, which, it is known will go into trans-Pacific service, will be allocated to companies operating out of Portland and Los Angeles.

The new liners, as previously announced are 14,000 ton boats, with first class accommodations for 250 passengers and large steerages. The vessels have a sea speed of seventeen and a half knots an hour, which in the case of the five boats that will run to Puget Sound, should enable them to make the voyage across the Pacific in from 18 to 20 days.

Apart from the flattering press notices and general satisfaction expressed by the audiences at the conclusion of each night's boxing, a number of congratulatory letters have been received by the promoters.

Sir Everard Fraser, K.C.M.G., says, "It was a great show."

The Commander-in-Chief writes, "That previous engagements prevent me from attending is a matter of great regret to me, not only on account of the object for which the entertainment is promoted, but because I am always glad to support boxing as a very wholesome exercise."

The headmaster of the Shanghai Public School, Mr. G. M. Billings, M.A., refers to the excellent two evenings sport provided and says, Among other things: inter alia. "It is doubtful whether we should have allowed our young boys to appear at a public boxing contest had it been in other hands than yours; but we had no hesitation at all in putting them in your care and our confidence has been amply justified. . . . I am sure that everyone, contestants and spectators, should be the better for what they assisted in, to say nothing of St. Dunstan's Fund. . . . It was clean, manly sport from start to finish and you may rest assured that we all very much appreciate, etc. . . ."

His honor, Mr. Justice Skinner Turner, after presenting the trophies at the conclusion of the second night's program, candidly confessed that "his only regret was in having found it impossible to be present on the first night."

Texas Oil Canners -:- By 'Bugs' Baer

Ringside, Texas.—The old carpetbaggers of the post-bellum days are now paralleled by the new oil canners of today. We chirp today, because you can never tell where they will be tomorrow.

The business of an oil canner is to sell some oil that ain't in a well that he doesn't own to a sap who believes all that he reads in the matrimonial news, plays an oboe and wears his hat exactly the way the clerk puts it on his skull piece. When the sucker comes out from under the ether he finds out that he doesn't own a well that hasn't any oil in, which is almost as bad as owning a well that hasn't any oil in it.

Santa Claus only comes around once a year in the rest of the U.S. because he spends the other 364 days in Texas, and as this is leap year the oil canners have an extra day in which to take advantage of the extra hour of daylight that Congress have 'em.

It's the old game of the jumping bean under the three thimbles: When you're wrong, the oil canner is right. When the oil canner is right, you're wrong. The cane you ring is the cane you get. Bnt you can't lasso an elephant with a cruller.

When you pipe an affable-looking stranger with one of those direct-from-manufacturer-to-consumer looks on his waffle it's best to take it on the nimble loop. He's an oil canner, boys, and he lets you buy the Bull Durham while he saves the certificates. He has a nice line of oratorical alfalfa that any dice shooter would describe as two sizes. You hold the bag on the badger hunt and the world knows that the little toy dog and the little tin soldier are still waiting for little boy blue to come back.

An oil well looks very pretty in the paper. There is always a map showing the oil-producing area. Right on the edge of this fine fat oil dorado is a tiny head. That's your well. Invest in that pin head and you're one yourself.

The map of Texas looks like a swiss cheese with two sets of holes. it used to look like a porous plaster on a cribbage board, but now its had a relapse.

The way to start an oil well company is to start digging a fence post hole and then forget to put the fence post in. That'll do for the well. Then buy a million barrels and butter 'em on the inside. That's your oil. Hire a press agent. That's your gusher. All you have to do then is to advertise and put on a catcher's mask so you won't get an eye knocked out by a thousand-dollar bill. Buy a straw hat. More oil wells would pay dividends if the company didn't have to pay so much freight in carting the oil to the well.

As we chirped before, there are two kinds of oil in a well. The most important is the oil they pour in your ear.

Lack Of Materials Hampers Road Work

The April report of the Acting Commissioner of Public Works, according to The Municipal Gazette, says that owing to the limited capacity of the plant at Sinza Depot progress on new work is necessarily slow and the extension of asphaltic road treatment will entail the construction of a further plant in the near future as repair work alone will make considerable demands on the plant. The tramway track between Siccawei and Hart road on Bubbling Well has been relaid and work has begun on widening The Bund south of Peking Road.

Miser's Money

Eden Philpotts lays the scene of his new novel, "Miser's Money" (Macmillan) in a region inevitably associated with Thomas Hardy, the bleak moor country of southwestern England.

However, the gloomy, devastating spiritual influence of the moorland is not visible in Mr. Philpott's characters, with one exception, old David Mortimer, who hoards all his pennies, hates women and excoriates every one about him with outbursts of bitterness and cynicism. The other characters have their individual faults and virtues, but they are for the most part good people, blessed with kind hearts and simple minds and not capable of rising or falling to any great heights or depths of passion.

David Mortimer, although cordially disliked for his crabbed nature, exerts considerable influence upon his relatives and neighbors through the possession of stores of hidden wealth. He contrives to extend this influence after his death, for in his will he bequeaths all his property to his favorite nephew, Barry Worth, on the condition, however, that Barry shall never marry. Being already betrothed to a girl, Barry defies his uncle's injunction and marries her, allowing the property to pass into the possession of other members of the family. Eventually it turns out that the young man has succeeded in having his cake and eating it, too. Old David has left a considerable sum of money buried in places only known to his nephew. By a judicious use of this money Barry is able to acquire a valuable farm. Then he saves his soul by confessing the whole affair to his wife, giving up the money to some of the relatives and making over the farm to an old aunt, who promptly returns it to him.

Barry has a brother, James, who is made of considerably weaker and less aggressive stuff. He is in love with a girl, Anstice, who returns his love, but neither are strong enough to overcome or disregard the opposition of the girl's parents, who marry her off to a wealthier and more pretentious suitor, Mr. Charles Pascoe. James then proceeds to cherish a hopeless passion for Anstice, to collect memorials of her, to weep over the grave after she is dead and to devote himself to her child. Mr. Pascoe, by the way, is an excellent specimen of the pharisaical puritan, most often encountered in Anglo-Saxon countries, who combines an anxious solicitude for "the Lord's business" with a shrewd eye for his material interests and an inexhaustible capacity for self-appreciation. At times Mr. Pascoe seems a slightly overdrawn figure, although it is doubtful whether the idiosyncrasies of his type can ever be exaggerated. But he is always entertaining, and supplies some of the best bits of humor in the novel. Witness his theory of prayer as a remedy for falling hair:

"He would not permit himself to pray that paraffin might restore his failing hair, although he knew that his aunt was doing so and felt no objection. It seemed a prayer that a good old aunt might pray, though hardly desirable that a man himself should approach his Maker on such a subject."

And witness again Mr. Pascoe's bland sublimation of the getting and keeping of money into a high unmistakable moral duty:

"'With money, like everything else, all depends on the point of view. If you look at money as a form of pleasure and indulgence it worries you; but if you look at it as a duty then it doesn't. You ought to ask yourself not whether you are getting all you can out of it but whether you are doing all you can with it.'"

There is a touch of parochial sentimentality about the novel. The author displays a rather unwarrantable partiality for poor stupid James, whose chief merits are that he has never injured any one and that he is always uttering pious sentiments. Then the ending seems a trifle too perfect to be convincing. All the characters turn out at once good, prosperous and happy; all the difficulties created by their passions and mistakes are cleverly swept away.

But sentimentality is a reasonably sure passport to popular favor, and Mr. Phillpots does not abuse his gifts in this direction as badly as some of our own writers. And the novel, as novels go, is decidedly good. The author has studied his background well; and some of his scenes of domestic life, in skill and minuteness of description, are worthy of George Eliot. The plot is also well constructed; it is a realistic narrative occasionally relieved by splashes of mystery and romance. "Miser's Money" is the work of an author who thoroughly understands his craft.

From Mud To Mufti

From Mud to Mufti. By Bruce Bairnsfather. Illustrated New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

Would you rather have been Marshal Foch or Bruce Bairnsfather? It seems to me that Marshal Foch had the easier job of the two. The great Frenchman, when I asked how he had won the war, remarked: "I just kept smoking my pipe." While Foch was "smoking his pipe" behind the lines, Bairnsfather was watching things around Dead Man's Curve in the trenches. He always noticed that at about the hour Foch lit his corncob the Americans who were about to go over the top started to roll cigarettes. So when he got back to Paris he drew a picture of a soldier lying on the ground rolling a cigarette in the midst of one of those uproars technically known as a battle and underneath he wrote: "When rolling your Bull Durham always keep the hands steady so that the tobacco lies evenly on the paper."

I believe I would rather have been the man who could record these doings in the trenches than the great Marshal himself. It is not a question of military immortality, but how to get fun out of the most tragic event that has ever happened on the planet. Bairnsfather, with word and picture, has made Mars laugh, and that's a great miracle. It is probable that if all the armies on both sides of the great conflict had been made up of caricaturists, humorous writers and "Les Joyeux," the battles would have resolved themselves into artistic and literary compositions, and the Kaiser himself would finally have been invited to sit on the Eiffel Tower and sketch the ruins of German seriousness. Humor is the schrecklichkeit that no God-ordained monarch can recover from.

"From Mud to Mufti" is, in a way, Bairnsfather's epilogue to his Comic War. Bruce has come marching home with Ol' Bill, and he confesses that much in his latest book has been written under the shadow of the Woolworth Tower. Which does not in the least detract from the value of what he has written or his amusing sketches.

COMIC WAR EPILOGUE

The humorist in war has never received his proper due. To him is given the tremendous task of keeping up the morale of the people back home and smoothing out the tragedy of the trenches to giggles and guffaws. When a great war breaks out humorists and caricaturists should be commissioned officers. They keep the sanity of armies and peoples. An army travels as much on its ability to laugh as on its stomach. If the editor of Simplicissimus had been the Emperor of Germany there would have been no war. But, war having once come, mobilise your Bairnsfathers immediately.

Bairnsfather excels in his humorous drawings. They fly to the eyes and stick in the brain. The chapters in "From Mud to Mufti" are often negligible. The author always has his eye open to the funny side of everything, and when writing he often conveys the impression of straining to make you laugh. His genius is in his sketch books, not in his writing pad. He is that rare thing—a great English caricaturist.

The unforgettable phiz of Ol' Bill runs all through the book. Bill is a classic—on the stage or on paper. He is the English equivalent of Romain Rolland's Colas Breugnon. Bill is Momus on the battlefield. War is a form of vaudeville. The trenches are all taverns. Canned up on ale and gin, he enters a battle with the gusto with which he plays skittles in the back room of The Better 'Ole.

SOME VARIED SKETCHES

In one of the sketches in "From Mud to Mufti" this incorrigible big boy is dressed as a Turk. In another he appears as a royal marine from H. M. S. Walrus. In still another he sits upon an icy mountain, hurling his quaint tavern English at the landscape—a veritable Tartarin of the Alps, but an English Tartarin, who does a thing and formulates his motives about it afterward.

In "the man who came 3,000 miles" Bairnsfather has done a straight portrait of one of our doughboys. It is the face that never said No to life, a bit of the Rockies done in flesh and bone with a pen. A traveler from Mars would know, somehow, that it is an American face.

Again there is the same face. Underneath, the simple word "Chateau-Thierry." The face was a grin this time. It has swallowed and digested an empire. But if he wanted to wash it down with a "kick"—well, that is another question, as they say in Rhode Island.

America has no Bairnsfather because we have not awakened to the enormous value of the straight caricature. We may grow—who knows? We need a Bairnsfather of war and a Louis Racmaekers of personal liberty.

MISS LULU BETT

Miss Lulu Bett. By Zona Gale. New York: D. Appleton & Co.

Miss Gale has so absolutely realised the story she tells, and knows so intimately the folk she draws, that "Miss Lulu Bett" speaks forcibly to those readers who care for actual human life and its problems in fiction. The book is simple in its elements, but it is wrought with careful detail. You come to know the characters and not only the characters, but the small-town background, which is seemingly only sketched in, yet so skillfully that every essential is there—you would walk in its streets with recognition, should some chance spirit you to the neighborhood, and find your way quite certainly to the house where the Deacons lived.

The hero of the tale is a mean-spirited little home tyrant, but though we are shown Dwight Deacon in all his pettiness, his ineffable self-satisfaction, we are made to understand, too, how it was that his wife could love him and look up to him, we see the hidden, delicate qualities of the man, the tenderness toward those he loves that somewhat redeems his selfishness. This bit of understanding is one of the masterly things in the book—a book that seeks to present human beings and not dummies, a book that is not merely an exploitation of the author's opinions, as is so often the case with novels, but a sincere and satisfactory effort to study life as we live it, under all sorts of inhibitions and within all manner of hedges.

Lulu Bett herself is an exquisite piece of portrayal. Her development during the course of the events that befall her is logical and natural. There is an unfolding of the potentialities within her that have been choked and stultified under the constant oppression and the nagging of her brother-in-law, the domineering of her mother, the airs of superiority of her sister, married and a petted wife, an unfolding that is as inevitable as the opening of a bud under the influence of sunlight.

For Lulu is that most pitiful of creatures, a poor relation living on sufferance in her married sister's house. With them lives the mother of the two women, and to pay for this double support Lulu does all the work of the house without the wages that would have been the portion of a servant. She gets her keep, and jolly glad she ought to be to get it, for there is a fiction in the family that Lulu "is not strong enough to work." It is a convenient fiction, since it keeps her working far harder than she would elsewhere, and saves the Deacons both time and money.

A little revealing scene occurs in the household shortly after we meet the family. The hour is that of supper, which Lulu has prepared and served. Dwight Deacon has been declaiming according to his wont, and his wife has been agreeing to him according to her wont:

And now the eye of the master of the house fell for the first time upon the yellow tulip in the center of his table.

"Well, well," he said. "What's this?"

"Ask Lulu," said Mrs. Deacon.

He turned his attention full upon Lulu.

"Suitors?" he inquired, and his lips left their places to form a sort of ruff around the word.

Lulu flushed. . . .

"It was a quarter," she said. "There'll be five flowers."

"Lou bought it?"

"Yes. There'll be five that's a nickel apiece."

His tone was as methodical as if he had been talking about the bread.

"Yet we give you a home on the supposition that you have no money to spend, even for the necessities!"

The mere notion that Lulu can have any attraction, any brains, that any opinion of hers could possibly be worth listening to: these things also are part of the family creed, hardly questioned even by Lulu herself.

Into this situation comes the brother of Dwight, who has been absent from home for many years, wandering through South America and our own West, finally settling in Oregon. Neither of the two sisters has met him and the letter announcing his approaching visit creates considerable excitement. Lulu is especially moved. When this brother arrives it is she who happens to be at hand to greet him, for there was no specified time given for the beginning of the visit. The man is stout, vain, kindly. But Lulu likes him. She talks to him, and he seems to enjoy talking with her. Indeed, as the time goes on he makes it evident that he likes her, that he sympathises with her.

MARRIAGE AND BIGAMY

"They make a slave of you, regular slave," he tells her. She won't admit this, but she cannot resist the pleasure of feeling that she has a champion.

By a curious fluke she and Ninian Deacon suddenly get married. The thing happens in joke, and then turns out to be real. There is a moment of horror for Lulu, but when Ninian shows very decidedly that he thoroughly approves of having her for his wife, she is happy.

The two leave on a short honeymoon, preparatory to returning to Oregon. Then Lulu discovers that Ninian is already married.

It is in her delineation of Lulu after this discovery that Miss Gale does some of the best work in the book.

Just how Lulu's story reaches its climax, and what supervenes upon her return to her brother-in-law's house it is for the reader to find out by reading the book itself. The story is charming, but the interesting thing is the effect on Lulu of her encounter with life, her experience of being a personage rather than an appendage. The book has something of that same quality of insight, humor and restraint that made the early stories by Kate Douglas Wiggin so worth while. To us it seems the best thing Miss Gale has yet done, and more than this, it is a promise of a new type of work from her. It realises a more mature point of view, a deeper understanding. "Miss Lulu Bett" is one of the books that ought not to be missed by any one who cares for a distinctively American story that is also a genuine human relation, well told and lighted throughout by a comprehending humor.

DISSOLVE COURT ORDER TYING UP FUNDS, WU ASKS

Finance Minister's Lawyers In New Attempt To Lift Court Injunction

Another attempt to dissolve the temporary injunction which has tied up about $2,000,000 deposited here in the name of Dr. Wu Ting-fang was made in the Mixed Court yesterday. British Assessor Blackburn and Magistrate Li, who heard the matter, reserved judgment.

Grounds advanced for the dissolution of the injunction are:

1—That the proceedings have been instituted for the purpose of supporting alleged political power and prerogative and as such should not be entertained by this Honorable Court but should be dismissed.

2—That in accordance with the above principle this Honorable Court has refused to decide or hear evidence upon any of the material issues in the action and in particular has refused to decide whether or not the Plaintiff is entitled to sue in the names of the Military Government and in the absence of a decision in favor of the Plaintiff on this issue the action should be dismissed.

(3)—That in the absence of a decision in favor of the Plaintiff on the issue referred to the Ground 2, the Plaintiff has no interest in the moneys in the hands of the defendant and the injunction should not therefore have been granted and should now be dissolved.

4—That if the moneys in the hands of the defendant are in the nature of a trust, the only persons who can apply for an injunction in respect thereof are a cestui que trust a co-trustee and that the injunction should therefore be dissolved.

5—That the effect of the injunction granted herein is permanently to restrain the defendant who is found by this Honorable Court to be a trustee of the said moneys from controlling or exercising authority over the same until he shall have compromised the said proceedings with the Plaintiff which would be improper and illegal and a breach of trust the plaintiff having no interest therein and the injunction is therefore unjust and should be dissolved.

ALL AMERICANS IN SHANGHAI INVITED TO SATURDAY FETE

Make up your mind to attend the American community picnic to be held in Jessfield Park Saturday afternoon.

This is the message sent out yesterday to all Americans in Shanghai by the American Song Service League, under the auspices of which the outdoor sports and supper will be gives. The Daily Bulletin issued by the League says:

"The roses are in their prime, thousands of them, and the great picnic supper will be spread nearby. You young men, griffins or others, are invited and expected to come and join in the footrace with other fellows to win a blue ribbon or a quiet stroll through the rose arbor with the prettiest girl in Shanghai (?).

"The committee doesn't insist but will be glad to provide chaperons for any couples desiring them. Food is being generously contributed and there will be an abundance for all. If you are 100 percent American boost for this picnic. If you hear of any one who is not planning to come on Saturday invite him or her to be your guest and bring them along. China Political Notes From Chinese Papers

After the expiration of his term of absense, Premier Chin will again tender his resignation. Because of the opposition of the Parliamentarians of the Chin clique, Mr. Chou Shu-mou has not consented to form a Cabinet. The term of Admiral Sah's acting will be prolonged.

A great deal of competition is being instituted for the posts in the new Cabinet. The Presidential Office desires to secure the Finance and Agriculture portfolios, while the Yen Chiu and the Anfu factions are fighting for the finance ministership also.

Certain Parliamentarians have submitted an interpellation for the fall of the Chin Cabinet, supporting Chin and opposing Chou. President Hsu was displeased and has sent a message to the Parliamentarians that their request will merely create ill-feeling.

It is reported that General Tien Chung-pu will be appointed Minister of war, while General Wu Kwang-hsin will be Military Governor of Shantung.

The Foochow incident will again be brought up, it is understood. Japan has consented to apologise, but demands that both parties should compensate the wounded of the other.

A circular order has been issued to the Provinces, prohibiting the emigration of Chinese laborers into Russia.

The reply to the Japanese note requesting direct negotiations as drafted by the diplomatic commission of the Presidential office has been approved by the Cabinet. All the ministers have endorsed their names and it will be sent to the Japanese Legation at once.

Representatives of the naval interests met at the Naval Club to consult on the question of the allegiance of the Southern Navy with the north.

SIGNS THAT SEEM SERIOUS

Often due to a Simple Cause

The debility, nervousness and distress which inevitably follow when the blood becomes thin often lead the victim to believe that he is suffering from a serious organic malady. Heart flutterings, a nervous cough, and indigestion are common symptoms in cases of thin blood or anæmia. Such symptoms are apt to frighten the sufferer into the belief that there is something radically wrong with his heart, lungs or stomach, and the ensuing worry only serves to further reduce his vitality.

Generally, what is needed at such times is a blood-builder that will tone up the impoverished blood. Once the blood has been restored to strength it will carry vitality to every part of the body, and the patient will be surprised to find that his heart again becomes normal and the rebellion of the stomach stops.

Dr. Williams' pink pills contain the elements necessary to make new blood and, as the nerves depend upon the blood for nourishment, it follows that in a wide range of diseases of the blood and nerves Dr. Williams' pink pills have been found invaluable, including cases of rheumatism, after-effects of influenza, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance and nervous debility.

To many thousands of people struggling against weak nerves, faulty digestion and broken health without finding strength from ordinary medicines Dr. Williams' pink pills have restored vigorous health and renewed joy of living during the past thirty years. Let them do the same for you. Now is the time to begin Dr. Williams' pink pills. Get a supply from your druggist, or send $1.50 for one bottle ($8.00 for six) to Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road Shanghai. A free book containing much useful information on the restoration and maintenance of health will be sent you in response to a postcard request to the above address.

ASK AMERICANS TO SEND NAMES OF WAR HEROES

Victims Of Great Conflict To Be Memorialised By People Of Shanghai

Names of Americans who were resident in Shanghai and who lost their lives in the Great War are desired by the Shanghai War Memorial Committee, according to an announcement made yesterday by the American Chamber of Commerce of China. Mr. W. A. Chapman, secretary of the Chamber, has asked that the names be submitted to him at once. He explained the matter in the following letter sent to members of the organisation:

"The Shanghai War Memorial Committee is planning a monument to those Residents of Shanghai who sacrificed their lives in the great war. This will be an international affair, and it is desired to inscribe on the monument the names of all such men of the allied nationalities.

"Will you kindly submit to this office, not later than May 25, the names of such American residents of Shanghai who gave their lives to the Great Cause, stating in your list the name of the company with which associated at the time of joining the forces?

"A corresponding request has been issued to several other organisations, and by means of the hearty co-operation of all we hope to secure complete information regarding Americans."

TURKISH WOMEN DANCE IN PUBLIC

Wives And Daughters Are Presented To Guests Dining In Fashionable Quarters

Constantinople, March 27.—Americans who knew Turkey before the war, and are back here now, express surprise at the rapid emancipation of the Turkish woman, especially when she happens to belong to the upper classes. Formerly American men's acquaintance with a Turkish family was limited to the men folk. Now, when they are asked to dine in a Turkish house in the fashionable quarters, the host presents his wife and daughters, and they behave like European women, chatting in good English or perfect French.

Turkish women not only accept invitations to dances and other gaieties on board American warships, but arrive without the traditional tchatchaff or veil, and dance like any American girl does at home. And, wonders of wonders, they are not at all shocked when their hosts propose to snapshot them. To take a photograph of a Turkish woman five years ago would have meant instant expulsion of the offender.

At Yalowa, a health resort near this city, Turkish women can now be seen dancing the fox-trot and other fashionable American dances in the public rooms. In the city, however, well-bred women do not yet frequent the cafes, but in health resorts they flock to them and enjoy their new liberty wisely and moderately.

This winter season was marked by many balls given in aristocratic Turkish houses; and Constantinople has lost much of its mystery, now the harem doors are open.

"What do you do with your other wives?" an American business man now in Constantinople asked of a Turk, after he had been taken around to several Turkish houses and introduced to only one wife in each.

"Many of us cannot afford more than one wife any more," the Turk answered. "And the elderly wives will not appear in public. They still cling to old customs, and many of them only talk Turkish. So they are leaving the social field free to their more attractive rivals and smoke cigarettes on divans in their own apartments."

There are several hundred girl students in this city and a large percentage of them are real Turks, not Levantines, Armenians or Georgians. At the art exhibition recently opened at Pera there are several pictures by Turkish women painters; they hold their own with canvases by Turkish male artists; but it must be remembered that art of this kind is not on a high scale in Turkey yet.

The general tax collections for the quarter amounted to Taels 284,248.22 from foreign residents and Taels 522,068.54 from Chinese. "PRICELESS" is a popular way of describing anything which has proved to be of exceptional value, and may therefore be employed to describe that old and favourite preparation—Beecham's Pills. The ever-increasing army of men and women who have experience of this excellent medicine generally use some such phrase as "priceless" or "Worth a guinea a box" when speaking of Beecham's Pills. This is certainly high praise. But it is well-merited. Beecham's Pills have proved, times out of number, to be a "priceless" preparation in the treatment of digestive ailments. They bring relief; they safeguard the health; they effect remarkable cures. All who suffer in any way from biliousness, sick headache, constipation, impaired appetite, and the resulting loss of energy and want of tone should take

Exchange:—After slight fluctuations during the week the London price of silver at 58⅝d. "Spot" and 57⅞d. "forward" shows a drop of 1¼d. and 1⅝d. respectively. New York silver is down from 103 to 99¾. Our local rate for T.T. on London went to 5/8 on Friday last but with resales and some special lines of Export paper appearing the rate has recovered to 5/10 with better rates offering against speculative resales of T.T. made yesterday. American Policy And The League Of Nations

IN the Fortnightly Review (London) for April, Hon. James M. Beck replies to several questions which are pertinent to the deadlock which has been reached in the United States over the League of Nations and the Peace Treaty. Mr. Beck, a Republican and former Assistant United States Attorney General, is one of America's ablest lawyers. He gained international prominence and the whole-hearted acclaim of the Allies in 1914 when he issued a brochure which he gave title as "The Evidence in the Case." This paper examined and sifted all the official governmental utterances concerning the origin of the war, and, at the end, placed all the blame on the Central Powers.

Mr. Beck is now opposed both to the League and to the Treaty. The most important questions which he answers in the Fortnightly are (1) "If not a League of Nations—what then?" and (2) "Has not the time arrived when the United States of America should abandon her traditional policy of non-interference in European affairs?" The questions are posed by Mr. D. Henry Rees. In reply to the question anent the League of Nations, Mr. Beck says:

"It is suggested that my opposition to the proposed League is a surprise because, in the first place, the idea had its origin in America. I fail to see what that has to do with it. As a matter of fact, it had its origin among little groups of idealists, some of them pacifists, who felt that it was only necessary to draw the scheme of world-government upon paper to ensure its success. I do not think the problem is so easy. As I said in a previous article, the American people unquestionably favored some method of international co-operation, as right-minded people in every country do. They favor it now. But a concrete plan which asks America to join in underwriting "the territorial integrity and political independence" of the world is quite another matter. That does not appeal to the American people.

"I cannot ask the space to set forth my objections to the proposed League of Nations. Many of them would be of doubtful interest to foreign readers, as they concern the peculiar interests of the United States, the integrity of its institutions and the maintenance of the policies under which it has grown great. But I have objections to the League which are quite apart from my citizenship. Speaking not merely as an American and believing that the progress of civilisation rises above the interests of any nation, I have, among other reasons, a basic and fundamental objection to this League.

"A true League of Nations must be based upon the equality of right of sovereign nations. In its last analysis that was the issue of the present world-war. The present Covenant destroys this principle by dividing the nations of the world into four unequal classes. The first class consists of five nations, who are vested with a perpetual tenure of power in the Executive Council, and who constitute a majority thereof. The second class consists of the four minority members of the Council, whose power and influence are necessarily affected by the fact that their tenure of power is limited and uncertain, as they may be supplanted by other nations, in the discretion of the Assembly. The third class is composed of the remaining members of the League, who are only members of the Assembly, and, as such, have powers which, as President Wilson said, are little above those of a debating society. The fourth class comprises the many remaining nations of the world, great and small, who, either of their own choice or by the action of the League, are excluded from membership therein.

"In my judgment no true League of Nations can be built upon the false foundation of such discrimination between sovereign nations. Sooner or later its authority would be challenged, either by internal dissensions or by attack from without. In fact, its moral authority is already bankrupt. The League of Nations has virtually been functioning since the Peace Conference met in Paris, and its impotence to impose its will, except upon the Central Powers, is manifest.

"But, Mr. Rees asks: 'If not a League of Nations—what then?'

"My answer is to recall a classic of American boy and girl readers when I was young. A series of papers appeared called "The Peterkin Papers." The first of them told a story about a good family by the name of Peterkin, who, although book learned, were profoundly stupid. They were thrown into confusion when the mother of the family put salt, instead of sugar, into the coffee. Thereupon the chemist, the pharmacist, the scientist, the family doctor and various other experts were called in to determine what could be done to neutralise the saline taste of the coffee. Finally, when all had exhausted their various remedies, they determined to consult a certain wise lady who came from Philadelphia, and she solved the difficulty by saying: "It is very simple. Make another cup of coffee.' This obvious remedy had never occurred to the Peterkin family, and the Paris Peace Conference does not seem to be wiser.

"The League is already moribund. Few men question the fact that, sooner or later, it will dissolve like a bubble. Its futility having been demonstrated, that which remains is to make another and a true League of Nations; for the present League is not a League at all. In my opinion, the best League of Nations that men have yet devised was The Hague Convention, which respected the basic principle of the equality in rights of sovereign nations. If it failed in 1914, it was not because of any inherent defect in its structure, but because its constituent members did not have sufficient sense of moral responsibility to respect its obligations.

"I admit that The Hague Convention was defective in one fatal respect. There was no provision to summon it to meet quickly in a sudden crisis. If The Hague Convention could be reconstituted with some useful amendments, and, among these, one which would authorise the permanent secretariat to summon a meeting of The Hague Convention, either upon his own authority, when they saw a crisis approaching, or upon the request of a given number of nations, then I believe The Hague Convention would function as effectively in preventing war by the power of public opinion and the greater pressure of common interests as any other method that has yet been devised. It is true that, when a world crisis arises, the members of The Hague Convention might run away from their obligations, as too many of them did in 1914. But if there be not now a sufficient sense of collective responsibility in the world for nations to stand together in the maintenance of peace, in view of the tragic disaster that has befallen civilisation, then no paper form of government would prevent another war.

"Again, Mr. Rees asks: 'Has not the time arrived when the United States of America should abandon her traditional policy of non-interference in European affairs?'

"I regret that I have not sufficient space to answer this question adequately.

"My reply is that isolation is impossible for the United States. As a policy it was abandoned long before the present world-war. It may be questioned whether the word "isolation" ever correctly described the foreign policy of the United States. From its very beginning it either voluntarily entered into, or was involuntarily drawn into, many world-problems. Its so-called 'policy of isolation' consisted largely in its disinclination, to use Washington's words, to 'implicate itself by artificial ties in the ordinary'—meaning thereby the local concerns—of European politics. In its early days of weakness it did not desire to become the shuttlecock of European politics. Of that it had bitter experience in the colonial wars which preceded the foundation of the American Republic. It did not object to alliances so much as to "entangling alliances," and by this oft-quoted expression it meant such contractual obligations by treaty alliances as would impair its freedom of action in future crises or contingencies.

"Assuming that 'isolation' does truly define the past policy of America; yet, from the time of the Spanish-American War, when, in another Treaty of Paris, the United States voluntarily assumed responsibilities in the far Orient, the policy of isolation was definitely abandoned.

"America's entry into the war in 1917 was not in strictness any departure from its historic policies, for primarily such entry was due to the purpose of vindicating its rights upon the high seas. Yet the nobler and broader purpose, which inspired many Americans, concerned one of those "extraordinary emergencies" of civilisation—again to use Washington's phrase—as to which he advocated the policy of temporary alliances.

"I agree that the United States, as a master-State of the world, has world-wide obligations from which it cannot escape without moral suicide. That America will play a great part in the future destinies of civilisation, I do not doubt; but it will play a greater and more beneficent part if it does not dissipate its moral influence and impair its disinterested character as a great and friendly arbiter by intermeddling in the local concerns of Europe. As President Monroe's Secretary of State said just a century ago, in words that I quoted in my previous article: 'It may be observed that for the repose of Europe as well as of America, the European and American political system should be kept as separate and distinct from each other as possible.'"

Knights

(The Knights of Columbus will, in August, present a Statue of Lafayette to Metz.)

Out from Metz on a bright June day
Came the Marquis de Lafayette.
The chimes rang out and the town was gay,
Bold in his youth he rode away,
Away to the West, and there he met—
Soldiers of France, brave Jouquerin,
Pelletier and his gallant crew,
Every one a fighting man—
Every one a man who knew
That life is brief and love is long
And liberty's all of a freeman's song.

Out to the struggling West he came,
Noble Marquis of Lafayette!
Out to the West he brought the flame,
The flame of France. His magic name
Caught men's hearts in its magic net.
The flame of France to a darkened land,
On and on in the struggle it went;
The flame of France to a stumbling band,
Ragged and worn and all but spent.
It gave new zeal to the freemen's fight
Till the whole world shone in its glorious light.

Back to Metz from the wondrous West,
Hail to the Marquis of Lafayette!
Back with bays from a chivalrous quest—
Write his name with the nation's best,
The names Columbia can't forget.
In the heart of Metz, there let him stand—
In America's heart his niche is made—
Facing the West, his sword in hand—
Glorious, young and unafraid!
Knight of France in a hundred fights,
Take this tribute from New World Knights.

JOHN B. KENNEDY.

The Anti-Wilson 'Mania'

Analysed By One Who Finds The President As Lonely And Well-Hated As Lincoln In 1862

By FRANCIS KING CAREY

Once upon a time a man with a doubtful sense of humor established a magazine which seems to have been designed to open its columns to writers whose views collided with those held by well-established public opinion, and he called it the Unpopular Review. It would not have been surprising if the editor of The New York Times had referred the writer of this article to the magazine in question instead of publishing it himself, because it must be admitted at the outset that an attempt to swim up the strong current of the national and, to some extent, the international hysteria of anti-Wilson mania—it can be designated by no less forceful word—has in it elements of futility if not perverseness.

Conceding for the purposes of argument that the "fashion" of anti-Wilson feeling, resolving itself in very many quarters into well-defined and uncompromising hatred and even contempt, is only a "fashion" which will pass, and that there may be behind the public expressions of this feeling an unexpressed opinion which has only for a moment been silenced, it must be granted that, for the moment at least—to use a popular expression—Wilson has been "bawled out," and that in a great many quarters and by a great many different classes of people it is being either joyfully claimed on sadly admitted that Wilson is not only a "down and out failure," but has not been loyal even to his own causes and ideals, if, indeed, present-day criticism credits him with ever having truly stood for either a cause or an ideal worthy of remembrance.

It is both noteworthy and significant that Harvey's Weekly, which the editor of The New Republic would probably call the "Town Topics of Reactionary Politics," and The New Republic, which the editor of Harvey's Weekly would probably call the "Police Gazette of Applied Anarchy," alike exhaust the language of insult and contempt to describe him. In money-minded Wall Street, in culture-minded Boston, in practical-minded Chicago, in the fashionable clubs of men and women, and in the gatherings of Socialist, Communist and undesignated proletariat assemblies you can always "start something" to your personal discomfiture and eventual humiliation if you offer the barest suggestion that Wilson has or deserves any defense; and you will have a very lonely time if you undertake to offer any. Even among men who have been counted his political friends and supporters you will find many who have grown weary of swimming against the current and who let themselves down with the statement that they are still loyal but sorrowing.

COMPARISON WITH LINCOLN

If you leave out of account a few professional "uplifters," a few professional pacifists and the negligible array of office-holding men and women who look to him and his Administration for their daily bread, you will be forced to conclude that at present Wilson—slowly and heroically recovering from a terrifying illness, which would have long ago sent into retirement a less brave or a less determined man—is as lonely and well hated a President as Abraham Lincoln was in the year of grace 1862!

But what will history say?

Men who hape reached and passed the chloroform age of three score years, if they have led and are still leading a reasonably normal and active business and professional life, acquire the habit not only of looking backward over the considerable tract of time which their lives have covered, but of looking forward—say for another score of years—and, after applying their practical experience, be it small or considerable, to the judgment of events which are passing in review before them, try to project their minds into the future and to inquire dispassionately what will be the judgment of twenty years hence, because experience has taught them that the judgment of the world, recorded in history "twenty years hence," has an exasperating way of reversing the judgments inspired by the fashions, hysterias and the manias of the passing moment.

The reason for this is not far to seek. History, in the first place, is much more concerned with the record of results than with the record of the instruments which have been selected to bring the results about. Because this is true, history is rather disquietingly disposed to measure men who have played prominent parts in shaping great events rather from the standpoint of the event itself than from the standpoint of the personal characteristics of the man. And history is a "wise guy" on the subject of manias and fashions and hysterias and is singularly uninfluenced and unastonished by them.

TWENTY YEARS AFTER

Of course, it is a rather happy fact that in only rare cases men live long enough to suffer the supreme mortification of discovering "twenty years hence" that they had allowed their judgments to be warped by passing "fashion" and that they had actually stood in the presence of a great event without for a moment grasping either its greatness or its significance; and that they had been really guilty of a form of political "provincialism," or, as our English friend would say, "parochialism." It would, moreover, be the refinement of cruelty to reincarnate those of our ancestors who burnt witches, glorified dueling, backed the slave trade, etc., if at the same time you gave them the attitude of the present moment toward these human foibles. And that train of thought is what makes the man of sixty a bit reserved about feeling sure that even a reasonably well concerted public opinion today will be indorsed by history written twenty years hence.

When Tennyson sang of that
"* * * one far off divine event
"Toward which the whole creation moves"
he was probably a good enough historian to realise that this "one" event was really a composite of many events which made up the life and progress of a nation or which represented the slow and painful climb of civilisation toward the light. So far as the short career of the United States is concerned—up at least to the nomination and election of Wilson—the composite "event" of its development was represented in outline by the Revolutionary War, the successful conduct and conclusion of which are associated with Washington; the civil war, which ended with the saving of the Union and the abolition of slavery under the guidance of Lincoln, and the curbing of special privilege and the cutting of the tie between rotten politics and rotten corporate misbehavior, for which Roosevelt will always be justly given the credit.

The corporation lawyer, whose professional duties necessarily made him an intimate of Wall Street and of the great railway, banking and other corporate interests there centered, likes to forget, if he can—so recent is this particular "event"—that he united in expressing an enraged public belief, emanating from Wall Street, and quickly poisoning the public opinion of the whole nation, that Roosevelt had paresis! In other words, the fashion and hysteria of the period which covered Roosevelt's second term led wise and patriotic men to believe sincerely and declare openly that Roosevelt's radical and, as it turned out, his successful efforts to arrest the grossness of legislative and corporate corruption—the corporate control of legislative bodies, the corporate subscription to corruptly used election funds, the exploitation by privileged interests of public franchises, the grant to great corporations of railway rebates, etc.—were marks of approaching insanity, of which his intense egotism and arbitrary reliance on his personal judgment were well recognised symptoms.

So close at hand is this event that men need not read history or biography to refresh their memories or regret their mistakes; but most of us have to turn to history and biography both to learn a similar lesson from Lincoln and the civil war, and all of us have to do so before we can be induced to believe that the Great Father of his Country was during his second Administration almost, if not quite so much, the victim of the hatred and contempt of his fellow-men as Wilson himself.

Indeed, so far as the printed page is concerned it is hard to match even in the unrestrained public press of today in its treatment of Wilson the brutality, insult and viciousness of the newspaper attacks upon Washington, who, it might be supposed, had so far won the gratitude and admiration of his countrymen as to enshrine him forever in their affection and veneration. As for Lincoln, who preserved the nation which Washington had created, can we match in Washington's day or in Roosevelt's day or in Wilson's day the sneers and contempt which dogged his footsteps until the day of his assassination? To most readers of the "Education of Henry Adams" the thrilling chapters are those which record the experiences of the young private secretary of the American Minister to the Court of St. James's during the terrible years of the civil war in this country, and nowhere can one find better described the sincerity with which the English gentlemen and statesmen really despised Lincoln.

From many standpoints the anti-Wilson bitterness of today is restrained by the fact that Wilson has the record of a well-bred man of the world and by his admitted learning as a student and fame as a historian. Lincoln, in his uncouthness and his ignorance of the ways and manners of the world, could interpose no such barrier to the avalanche of malice and hatred which was unremittingly his portion. But history shows no recollection of or concern with the criticisms of Washington or Lincoln. Ask Mr. Asquith, Lord Grey, Lord Bryce or any other great English statesman of today for the name of the greatest American and he will give you Lincoln's, and today's judgment of the American people will couple Washington's name with Lincoln's and stand in hearty agreement. If history is not yet prepared to write Roosevelt's name on the same tablet with Washington and Lincoln, who doubts that it will some day be written there?

But if Washington's one track led to the creation of the nation, and Lincoln's one track led to its preservation from disunion, and Roosevelt's one track led to its second preservation by stopping the corruption of its governmental sources—to what terminal point will history say that Wilson's one track has led? Is it not reasonably probable that when history is written it will concern itself little with but one conclusion, namely, that Wilson was chosen—by God, or, if you please, by fate, or by national evolution—to see to it that the war did not end without the creation of some form of international legal organisation around which should revolve, under the leadership of the United States, a bona fide effort to make wars of aggression difficult and unpopular; to combat the fool notion that war is a legitimate, if not a desirable, "out-of-door sport" for civilisation, and to make it as unfashionable public opinion has finally made the duel, the slave trade, the lottery and the drunkard—and that he "delivered the goods!"

Similarity In Bank Names

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir.—In your issue of the 16th inst., you headed a Peking telegram "Sino-Italian Bank for Peking Denied Place in Registry" while the text showed that the firm concerned was the "Sino-Italian Industrial Bank."

May I draw your attention to the similarity of names between the bank above referred to and the "Sino-Italian Bank" which has been recognised by both the Italian and Chinese Governments?

Our bank successfully inaugurated its Tientsin offices a few days ago and will open a branch at Peking this week. Yours faithfully,

E. Denegri.
Co-Director Sino-Italian Bank.
Shanghai, May 19, 1920.

An Honest Service Acknowledged

Sir.—I am a believer in criticisms of any facts of society which are worthy of thought, as I believe such criticisms are educatory and helpful.

I believe also in sympathetic appreciation of acts that are worthy of appreciation, and I think the following incident is worthy our appreciation:

A few days ago I was sending out from my desk about thirty notes. Among them was one, unsealed, which I intended to take myself. It had, loosely slipped inside of it, a little silk bag with five dollars in it, and some other notes. This made it so bulky that it could not escape the notice of the ones who handled it.

I gave it, with the others, to my boy. He put it into the branch office near me.

When I knew of my mistake I sent word to the office. They courteously sent a man to see me about it. It had gone on out in the regular channel. In due time, the friend for whom it was intended received it—still unopened and its contents undisturbed.

No one could have been blamed. It was my mistake, and no one could have been detected; it passed through many hands and reached its destination! That its contents were not lost in handling speaks well for the careful handling of the Chinese Post Office. That its contents were safe, speaks well for the loyalty of the post office employes, and I feel it deserves this notice.

Appreciative.

How Can She Wear A Laurel Wreath?

(From The New Witness)

How can she wear a laurel wreath
So carelessly and green,
When she is half a child beneath,
And half a gypsy queen?

A grown, grown man's a child to her,
And heir of happiness,
And never a beast is wild to her,
Nor lone bird motherless.

For her the fox, owl, hunted hare—
All sylvan creatures shy:
And lightless moles look up aware
When she is passing by.

The cormorant will catch for her
The seagull and the swallow,
The water-hen will hatch for her,
Her fluffy friends that follow.

None are rebuffed and none reviled
Who've been where she has been,
For she's half wild and half a child,
And she's a gypsy queen.

Puritan Is The Biggest Sinner In His Prohibitions, Says Author

(New York Tribune)

St. John G. Ervine greeted The Tribune's representative with a difficult query:

"How does one offer hospitality in this country now?" he asked.

There was no answer. Nevertheless the author of "John Ferguson" and "Jane Clegg" led the way to the cafe of the hotel. Lemonade was suggested and between sips he talked.

For a man who has written plays of the calibre of "John Ferguson" and the present production at the Garrick Theater, St. John G. Ervine looks surprisingly young. He is a little above average height, with wavy brown hair and keen, twinkling blue eyes. His ruddy complexion is indicative of the outdoor life he leads and has led. As an officer in the Dublin Fusiliers he was hit by a shell while coming out of a trench at the Forest of Nieppe and lost his right leg. Before this the play-wright walked at least ten miles daily and now finds it difficult to get enough exercise.

"I find I can still swim," he said, "and that will help greatly."

He looked at the lemonade.

"In England some whisky and soda would be just the thing for an occasion such as this. I don't know how Americans are going to offer hospitality with prohibition in effect. Every sensible man believes there should be regulation of the liquor traffic, but there must be a limit. Fanatical reformers never seem to know when to stop. They are going after the cigarette now, I hear. Next they will attack the theater. A little while later a man will not be permitted to live with his wife unless he has a certificate of permission from the Mayor. It will be made a crime even to go around with a smile on your face. In Ottawa it is now forbidden to go tobogganning on Sundays. Children's games are prohibited in London because of the Sabbath. Why these restrictions?"

Mr. Ervine hastened to explain that the prevention of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic drinks would not work personal hardship.

"I very seldom take the stuff, but I must confess that in two months in America under prohibition I have had more to drink than I had in England in eighteen months.

"The Puritan is the biggest sinner," says the Irish author. "He does not trust himself and is afraid to trust others. Soon the Puritans will have us walking around miserable in the world if we let them. Perhaps there will be another Mayflower to carry them away from these shores.

"The average man is a patient beast. He is too busy or not keen enough to look into things, while the fanatics are well organised, work efficiently at nothing else but their reforms and prohibitions. When they are ready they slip them over, as prohibition was slipped over. The fanatic is like the tiger. Once he tastes blood, he becomes rampageous and is hard to stop. But wait until the average man gets his 'monkey' up and then look out. Revolution is likely, the heads of a few Puritans may be cut off, and then the world will be a sane place to live in again for a while."

Mr. Ervine described Tolstoy as an example of a man who could not trust himself and therefore preached suppression.

"Tolstoy was a man of great vitality and in youth lived a rather loose moral life. Then he got religion or some such thing, but, still retaining his vitality, he kept himself in check by expressing it in suppression," Mr. Ervine said.

Five years after he had come to London from his birthplace, Belfast, to go into the insurance business, Ervine wrote his first play, "The Magnanimous Lover," in one act. This was fourteen years ago, when he was twenty-two, but the play is still being produced here. "Mixed Marriage," which was presented by the Irish Players when they were here last, a long play, was written a year later, and then the young man tried a novel, "Alice and a Family," "Jane Clegg," which is being presented so successfully at the Garrick Theater by the Theater Guild, was written nine years ago, followed by "Mrs. Martin's Man," a novel, and then "John Ferguson," written in the early months of 1914. Some of his other writings are "Changing Winds" and "The Foolish Lovers," novels, and "Peter the Wicked," a farce, and "The Wonderful Visit," a dramatisation of H. G. Wells's novel.

Before going into the service Mr. Ervine managed the Abbey Theater, in Dublin. He became a private soldier in the Household Battalion at Windsor, and then went to France as an officer with the Dublin Fusiliers, fighting with them at Arras, Cambrai, Hazebrouck and at the Forest of Nieppe, where he was wounded.

'Senator Tillinghast, Of Texas'

BY ROY K. MOULTON

Senator Tillinghast, of Texas, is making a whirlwind campaign of the country for President, and when we interviewed him at his hotel last evening he was confident of victory. The Senator is a man whom the nation delights to honor, and it isn't necessary to prove this. He admits it freely when questioned.

The Senator has no capitalist or corporation behind him financing his campaign, but hopes to have if he can find one. He feels that he should not depart from the usual custom. "The traditions," says the Senator, "must be preserved. I favor the old American ways."

The Senator is a striking figure. It is not known how tall he stands in his stocking feet, as he never wears them. He is Texas's favorite son and comes from the old Tillinghast family of Pea Ridge, Texas. He can stand in his front hall in Pea Ridge and shoot through a keyhole and around a corner and hit a Mexican sitting on a mule in front of the post-office at Chihuahua, Mexico.

He is a strong party man, having belonged to all the parties at various times, and has had a long and honorable career in the Senate. He has never voted wrong on any great public question, having always been in Pea Ridge on business when important votes have come up. During the recent treaty fight he voted with the President twice and with the reservationists twice. "What," asks the Senator, "what could be fairer than that?"

The Senator has sponsored some highly important legislation during his career. He pushed through a bill appropriating $9,000,000 for the widening and deepening of Pea Ridge Creek; a bill appropriating $546,783.25 for a brick post-office at Pea Ridge; a bill making it a misdemeanor for any boll-weevil to move into Texas from an adjacent State and a bill making it necessary for every oil gusher to gush at least fifteen minutes after all the suckers have been landed.

The country can hardly overlook these great services he has rendered it now that there is an almost unanimous demand for a great national mind in the Presidential office. In fact, the Senator has all the qualifications embodied in all other candidates combined. His claims to the Presidency are as good as any that have yet been presented, and his platform will compare favorably with those that have been announced.

Senator Tillinghast has been hard at work on this platform for several months, and has finally completed a patent adjustable platform that can be stretched here and there to suit the needs of any part of the country where he may be speaking. The planks are interchangeable, and one plank can be dropped out and another substituted at a moment's notice. He has them in all lengths and thicknesses. The prohibition plank is worked by a trick spring and can disappear and reappear as required by the sentiment of the audiences.

Nothing could be clearer than the Senator's stand on the great public questions of the day, which he outlined fearlessly as follows:

"Prohibition: My stand on this question permits of no misunderstanding. I need only to say that it is a question the importance of which cannot be overestimated. I hear people talking about it everywhere, and where so many people are talking there must be some sentiment. The country can trust me to act as I think best in this matter.

"The Tariff: Where the tariff is too high it shall be lowered, and where it is too low it shall be highered.

"The Treaty: Popocatapetl is a high volcanic mountain in southern Mexico which is active about every ten years. A man with a mule can easily negotiate its ascent in seven days. If he falls off the mule he can easily get back to earth in seven seconds. I hope that explains my stand on the peace treaty question beyond all doubt.

"The League of Nations: If eventually, why not now? If not, why at all? I ask you, in all fairness, is that not the truth?

"Shall we have a larger navy or a smaller one? Yes.

"Short Skirts: I believe this question should be left to the ladies. Judging by the past, I believe that if we leave the matter entirely to their judgment we will not miss anything.

"High Cost of Living: I realise that this is a question that must be dealt with. If elected, I shall give the matter my attention. If not, I shall not. I do not say this as a threat, but just to set the country right in the matter.

"Capital and Labor: I have two planks on this question and will produce either for the party interested. Each plank solves the difficulties of the class in whose behalf it was written. Until I am elected I believe in both Capital and Labor.

"Government: I believe that in due time the Government should be turned back to its owners—the people. I believe this should happen at the close of my two terms of office.

"Equal Suffrage: I believe in giving the women the vote if they can get it. If an amendment to that effect is passed I believe in allowing them to vote."

Senator Tillinghast made many friends while in our midst by his straightforward manner of expressing his convictions. His outline of principles compares very favorably with many we have heard.

Hongkong Market

Messrs. Moxon and Taylor write as follows in their report dated May 14:

The heavy drop in exchange has improved business considerably, and a larger volume has been done in the period under review than for a considerable time past.

Sugars have kept steady and have monopolised a good deal of interest, and investment stocks have also been in favor.

Shanghai continues moribund and very few advices are coming through and certainly less buying orders.

In London tightness of money continues to exercise an adverse influence. "Shells" being down on the week but on the other hand there is an improvement in the Indo-China quotation. London having taken shares at £41 and £42 closing with an unsatisfied demand at slightly higher rates.

The chief alterations since last week are as follows:

Hongkong Banks:—Have been the medium of a fair business at $630 closing with buyers at the rate.

Unions:—Have advanced to $195 business done.

Wharves:—Continue round about $86.

Hongkong Docks:—Have buyers at $151½ with $154 done for June.

Shanghai Docks:—Appear to be weaker, and $133 is quoted for cash, $135 for June and $137 for July.

China Sugars:—Continue to be dealt in to a fair extent at $227 for cash, $234 for June and $238 for July.

Dairy Farms:—Have steadily advanced to $27, at which rate, however, there are sellers.

Hongkong Lands:—Have had a sharp rise to $117 for cash at which a fair business has been done, and further shares could be placed at this rate.

Cements:—Have advanced to $7.10.

Indo Chinas:—After having changed hands at $184 are now wanted at $200.

Hongkong Electric Company New Shares:—Have been dealt in at $20 and slightly better, but at the close the market is weak, sellers predominating.

Saturday Night, May 22nd, 1920, commencing at 8.30 p. m.

SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT OF
THE FAMOUS AMERICAN ENTERTAINERS

Miss HAZEL BOYD & Mr. WILLIS WEST

who will appear during dinner in the dining room and after dinner in the ball room.

Quite a number of our patrons were disappointed last Saturday on account of Mr. West being unable to appear in his character as the original "ABIE COHEN." Mr. West has consented to appear this night in costume with Miss Boyd in the laughable monologue;

"ABIE'S NIGHT OUT"

During dinner Miss Boyd will do her speciality as
